SAMARITAN NERVINE
NEVER FAILS.
"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply, because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It's known world wide as
THE GREAT
NERVE CONQUEROR
It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MED. CO., Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo. Chas. N. Oh, My Back!
That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.
The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.
Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.
Logansport, Ind. Dec. 1, 1880.
For a long time I have been a sufferer from stomach and kidney disease. My appetite was very poor and the very smell almost I did eat disagreed with me. I was annoyed very much from non-retention of urine. I tried many remedies with no success, until I used Brown's Iron Bitters. Since I used that my stomach does not bother me any. My appetite is simply immense. My kidney trouble is no more, and my general health is such, that I feel like a new man." After the use of Brown's Iron Bitters for one month, I have gained twenty pounds in weight. O. B. SARGENT.
Leading physicians and clergymen use and recommend BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.

SELECT STORY.

A FORTUNATE MISTAKE.

BY PIERCE LORIMER.

It was on the evening of the 2d of May, in 185—, that I went to hear the Russian Princess Strainervoyce, who at that time attracted the fashionable world to her concerts. I went to hear the Princess partly to kill time, and partly from a desire to see and hear for myself the marvelous foreigner whose name was in everybody's mouth. When I reached Her Majesty's concert room it was crowded to its utmost capacity. It was so closely wedged that one could have studied anatomy, after a fashion, merely from the impression of one's neighbor's bones. At the close of the concert I was borne along with the crowd, and jammed through the doorway at the risk of breaking every rib in my body. Ere I could escape from the throng, and while I was shrugging my shoulders to assure myself that my collar-bone was in its proper position, I felt a hand clasping my arm, and a musical voice exclaimed:

"You good for nothing! I thought I had lost you! What a frightful crush! I do believe my arm is broken, and my dress ruined, and all for the sake of hearing this Strainervoyce!"

I was on the point of replying that I agreed with her, but restrained myself, laughing inwardly at the novel position in which I was placed, and wondering who my fair companion could be. Evidently she mistook me for her brother, or, possibly, her husband, judging from the familiarity of her manner, for she added, in a sympathizing tone:

"Forgive me, Ralph—your poor head! I am sorry I made you come."

"Pardon me, madam," said I; "but——"

"Oh, nonsense, Ralph!" she interrupted me. "You have become half barbarian since you went to the Crimea, to permit me to seat myself, while you stand there as if I were your wife, and you ten years married, instead of your sister, whose ready assistant and attendant—in place of a better—you should be."

"Excuse me," said I, but—"

"Ralph, I shall catch my death of cold sitting here, and such a long ride, too." Here the lady gave a peculiar shiver. "Do jump in and sit down, or I will—"

What she would have done I did not wait to hear; but taking my place beside her in the brougham, we were driven off, whither I knew not where.

"I won't ask you to talk to me, with that headache, but I want you to listen to me," began my companion, the moment we started. "I wanted to talk to you coming in, but that little chatterbox, Maggie, prevented me from saying a word to you. You remember poor little Lucy Walters, Ralph. Her mother died about two months ago, and the poor girl has gone to live with the Deans. Mr. and Mrs. Dean has been very kind to her, but it is impossible for them to do more than shelter her. How anyone can have the heart to wound Lucy's feelings is a mystery to me, and yet every occasion that presents itself is seized upon by the Wares and Kings to insult her, even to commenting upon the poor girl's father's actions, as if she could have prevented that which occurred twenty years ago, and I have seen Sarah Ware imitating her walk, regardless of poor Lucy's tears."

I could not restrain an exclamation of disgust as I listened to this.

"I knew it would disgust you, Ralph," continued my companion. "Well, the doctor says now that Lucy will always be lame—there can be nothing done for her. I have been thinking, ever since her mother died, that if she had a good teacher she might not only be independent, but achieve a name as an artist. You should see some of her attempts. She is a genius, Ralph. But that would require money, and where is the money to come from? You know I haven't much, Ralph, but I have determined to do something for our old playmate. I can save out of my allowance at least thirty pounds, and now if you will double it, what will that not do for Lucy? I was counting it up the other day, and if I am correct it will enable her to attend the School of Design and take private lessons in Art for a year; and, at the end of that time, if Lucy is alive, she will show the world what a woman can do. When I look at the poor girl, with her rare mind and her craving for knowledge, I cannot help thinking how superior she is to me—a mere idler; and I sometimes think that if she had my place and I hers, there would be more justice in the distribution of the world's goods and comforts. Don't say I'm silly and sentimental, Ralph. I know you will give your share toward the sum, like a good brother, as you are. I have been talking to her about it, and I know I can manage it so as to overrule any scruples she may have against receiving anything from us."

Here my companion became quiet, and the question presented itself to my mind, "How am I to escape from this awkward position honorably? Here I have been guilty of listening to a communication intended for the ear of another—have been guilty of an inexcusable deception practiced upon a stranger and a lady knowingly. Perhaps the honest plan would be to acquaint her at once with the mistake and solicit her pardon."

I had at last summoned sufficient courage to clear my throat, and was about to commence my well-studied speech, when my companion gave a little laugh, as she said:

"Really, Ralph, you are very entertaining in your own peculiar way; but if you are as dumb when in the presence of Miss Vernon as you have been to-night, she is to be pitied rather than envied. You are little better than a barbarian! But here we are at uncle's, and you know I promised to stop with Carrie to night; so you will have no one to bother you the remainder of the road. How singular you do act to-night, Ralph! Well, I won't tease you any more.

Suddenly the driver drew up before an elegant residence, and imagining I perceived a loop hole whereby I might escape from my awkward predicament, I sprang out of the brougham and assisted the lady to alight.

"Is your head still aching, Ralph? Good-night! Why, you forgot to kiss me!"

As the fair face was upturned to mine, with its tempting lips awaiting the kiss, I pressed my shawl down from my mouth suddenly, and as suddenly felt my head drawn down to receive the most delicious kiss that ever was bestowed by maiden.

"You need not wait; the door is open, and there stands Carrie, bless her!" said my companion, as she tripped up the steps, while I stood irresolute beside the brougham.

"Then, my dear fellow," I mentally ejaculated, "it is time you were off." And, seating myself in the brougham once more, I was again driven off, but whither I knew not. I only knew that I had lost a charming companion, whose lips a moment since were pressed against my own, and whom, in all probability, I might never meet again. And when I recalled her generous offer, her sympathy for the poor lame girl and her self-accusing spirit, so unlike that of my acquaintance in general, I longed to know more of her. Then, again, my cheeks tingled when I remembered the deception I had practiced. And what would she think of me when she ascertained—as she most certainly would, sooner or later—the truth?

My speculations were, however, cut short by the abrupt stoppage of the brougham, whereupon I stepped out leisurely, picking up from the bottom of the carriage as I did so, an exquisitely embroidered handkerchief. Upon looking at it closely, I perceived the initials "C. W." in one of the corners. I was reminded of my situation at that moment by the driver's inquiring "if Mr. Ralph would want him any more to-night;" so I merely shook my head, and without vouchsafing a word of explanation, I turned away from him and walked homeward.

Evidently I bore a very strong resemblance to Mr. Ralph, whoever he was. When his own sister and the servant were deceived by the resemblance, it must certainly be very great. True, my cap was drawn down firmly, almost concealing my eyes, and the lower part of my face was muffled up in a heavy shawl, still, taking everything into consideration, I said to myself, the similarity of dress, feature and manner must be wonderful thus to deceive one's relatives.

It was a late spring, and the frosts in May cut off most of the fruit round London. The night was in that communicative mood termed "nipping," and remembering that a walk of four miles lay between me and the Albany, I walked forward briskly, revolving in my mind the different aspects of my adventure, as they presented themselves, one after another, and resolving to keep my own counsel. I had walked perhaps a mile when I observed a gentleman approaching at a walk as rapid as my own. As he drew nearer I was struck with his resemblance to me—height, size, manner and dress, even to the wrap around his neck, and the buttons upon his coat were the exact counterpart of my own. I think the resemblance must have struck him at the same time, for, as we were passing each other, we involuntarily paused, scanning each other closely and curiously, then strode on. "Mr. Ralph," I said to myself, as I turned to look at him. Singularly enough, Mr. Ralph was at that moment looking at me; but the instant he was detected he wheeled around and resumed his walk. Ere I reached my chambers I resolved to ascertain, if it was possible, who the person was who dwelt in the large house on the Common, and who had arrived from the Crimea so recently, that I might thereby assure myself to whom I was indebted for a delicious kiss, and whose acquaintance I was very desirous of making.

Early upon the following morning, I sat down and wrote a few lines to Miss Lucy Walters, the lame girl, and inclosing three ten pound notes, sealed the letter, and depositing it in my pocket, sallied forth in quest of the information I so much desired. Wending my way to a friend's chambers, I encountered a young articled clerk, who was at that moment entering the door.

"George," said I, affecting a careless manner, "I wish to ask you a question;" and I then inquired if he was acquainted with the neighborhood in which I had been on the previous evening.

"Yes, sir, very well," he replied.

"Can you tell me who lives in the large house with the two eagles on the gate posts, on the left-hand side of the Common? The house stands back from the road."

"Oh, you mean Mr. Wright's," said he; "but it's more than four miles out there, sir."

"How far is it?" I asked.

"About four miles and a-half; may be no more."

"Thank you. That is all I want," I replied, as I passed into the house, where I addressed my note to "Miss Lucy Walters, care of Miss C. Wright;" then sauntering out slowly, I called the lad to me.

"By the way, George," said I, "I have a letter to deliver out there. Do you think you could do it for me? If you would call a cab—any way that you could get there soon; and when you deliver it, don't stay a moment. I don't care about having you questioned."

He was a shrewd lad, and as he listened to me, I knew by the expression of his face that he guessed my motive.

"You don't want them to know where it came from, if you can help it?" said he.

"You understand me, I see," said I.

"Well, I can manage it for you, Mr. Clark," said the lad. "My Uncle Dean lives out there."

"Is Mr. Dean your uncle?" I inquired, hastily.

"Yes, sir," he replied.

"There is a lame girl living with him?" I continued.

"Yes, Miss Walters," he replied.

"Can I trust you, George?" I inquired.

"You may, sir, if you want to help Miss Walters without her knowing who is doing it," said he.

"Well," said I, "this letter is intended for Miss Walters, as you will perceive. It is a money letter, and if you can convey it to her that is all that is required. You will keep the matter to yourself?" I added, as I endeavored to place a sovereign in his hand.

"No sir, not that, Mr. Clark. I only wish I could do twice as much for Miss Walters," exclaimed the fine fellow. "I shall put the letter where she will get it, and she will never know where it came from. I am going there to-night."

Very well, George," I replied, as I left him, feeling satisfied that the note was in safe hands.

* * * * * *

"That lady in blue?" said my cousin.

"No," said I, "the lady beside her.

"Have you not made her acquaintance? That is Miss Wright."

"Any relation to Miss Emma Wright?"

"No; they are quite intimate, however. Let me present you."

I fancied Miss Wright bestowed a look of more than ordinary curiosity upon me as my cousin presented me; but I—I had the effrontery to meet her inquiring look as if unconscious of the fact that I had met those eyes before, and had received from those lips a sisterly kiss. As I seated myself beside her I overheard the words, "taking everything into consideration, I think very little blame can be attached to the gentleman," uttered in a merry tone by a person who was at my elbow, but whose face was turned from me.

"Pray, have done, Ralph!" said Miss Wright, as she tapped his shoulder lightly with her fan, a faint blush suffusing her cheeks.

"But the coolness of the whole proceeding," continued the party addressed as Ralph, heedless of her remonstrances. "The fellow even gave her a brotherly kiss."

"Ralph!" exclaimed Miss Wright, energetically, as the blood mounted to her forehead, dyeing her face and neck crimson.

"Come, come, Wright, don't ask us to believe that!" exclaimed one of the group.

"Well, she cannot deny having complained to me the next day that he was exceedingly stupid—thinking I was the offender all the while—and scarcely uttered a word; that, in fact, she had to do all the talking.

"We will take that with considerable allowance, too," replied one of the listeners,

"I met the fellow on the road," resumed the gentleman; "and I must say I never encountered a man so like myself in all my life."

"In truth, you are a barbarin, Mr. Wright, to tell such things about your sister," exclaimed our hostess, with a merry laugh.

"As if I did not owe her ten times as much!" said the young man. "Ever since that evening she has been teasing me in every conceivable manner," he added, turning round suddenly toward her, and in doing so, encountering my steady gaze, he ejaculated, with a perceptible start, upon facing me, "There he is!"

Miss Wright flashed a meaning glance upon him, then suddenly turned toward me, as if to observe the effect his exclamation and manner would produce upon me; but I was equal to the emergency, and maintained an unruffled composure.

"I did not hear the first of that, Miss Wright," I said, as I cast a careless glance over the wondering group, and another of pretended astonishment upon Mr. Wright, who evidently felt no little annoyance.

"Perhaps it is just as well," was the reply, as she glanced at her brother. "Ralph really is unmerciful when he begins. I am glad you did not hear the whole; but now that it is out, I may as well give a correct version of the affair. Like an attentive brother he permitted the crowd to seperate us at the close of the Princess Strainervoyce's concert on Tuesday, and I was so unfortunate as to mistake a stranger for him, who accompanied me home without acquainting me with my error. Thinking that it was Ralph, and that his headache prevented him from talking, I did permit my tongue to perform rather more than a fair share."

"Then all the blame must be laid upon Mr. Wright. He should be the last to mention it. His want of proper feeling is very much to be deprecated; but let us hope that he will change for the better," said our hostess. "I think even now he exhibits signs of repentance."

"And have you no idea who the gentleman was, Miss Wright?" I inquired.

Until lately," she replied, placing an emphasis upon the word, "I had not the slightest clew to the gentleman."

"Does she know the truth?" I asked myself. "Have I betrayed myself? I might have known that her woman's instinct would detect me."

While these and similar thoughts occupied my mind I became engaged in an interesting conversation with Miss Wright. In the course of it allusion was made to the Princes Strainervoyce.

"Did I attend her last concert?"

"Really, was it the last or the one preceding it, or the second? Certainly I attended one of them, but which of them? My memory was so treacherous. Perhaps it was the last; at least, there was a suffocating crush."

And the conversation went on as before. The digression removed all doubts from her mind. I at least had known nothing of her adventure prior to that evening, when her mischief-loving brother made it public.

I do not think I was romantic at that time, and yet I must convess that, from the beginning of our acquaintance, I entertained the hope that Miss Wright would one day become my wife. I was not disappointed.

* * * * * *

It was perhaps six months after we were marrried that I carried home in my pocket a newspaper containing a flattering notice of Miss Lucy Walters. As Mrs. Clark employed herself with her work, I drew forth the paper and read to her the notice. Lucy was pursuing her studies and carried off the prize medal. As she listened to the flattering comments paid to her protege, my wife's face lit up with a glow of pleasure.

"Ralph used to laugh at me when I told him that Lucy would one day make a name for herself," she said musingly. "I have so often wondered," she continued, as she resumed her work, "who it was that gave her that money."

"You mean the person who accompanied you to your Uncle Graham's from the concert?" said I.

"Yes," she replied; "it was very singular, his giving the money in the way he did.

"Doubtless he did it to secure your good opinion," said I.

"Then he has never had the satisfaction of knowing how it was received," said my wife.

"Of course he has, though," said I.

"How do you know?" inquired Mrs. Clark, looking up from her work. "He may be dead."

"But he is living, Caroline," said I.

"Who is living?" she asked.

"The person you so often think about, who sent Lucy Walters thirty pounds, and whom you kissed."

"Mr. Clark!" exclaimed my wife, as the work fell from her hands into her lap.

"Mrs. Clark!" I retorted.

"You don't think! How can you say such a thing!" And a puzzled expression rested on my wife's face that, in spite of all my powers of resistance, forced me to laugh aloud.

"Oh! I remember now," she said; "Ralph said something like that once when you were present."

"Then, Mrs. Clark, you deny having kissed him?"

She threw her work aside suddenly, and arose. "Harry! is it possible that it was you?"

"Very probable, certainly."

"And you have concealed it all this time! You are the most deceptive of men!" she exclaimed.

"Don't blame me for doing what neither you nor any other woman can do," said, "and that is, keep a secret—unless it be her age."

"I will not believe it?" said Mrs. Clark.

"Because you tried to surprise me into a confession and failed," I replied. "Then let this be the proof."

I was prepared for this scene, and I drew from my pocket the embroidered handkerchief and pointed out to her innitials. Whereupon we mutually agreed that she had made a "Fortunate Mistake."

The Greenbackers.

FORTY OF THEM HOLD A STATE CONVENTION AND NOMINATE A TICKET.

WILLIAMSPORT, August 30.

There was a very small representation of delegates at the Convention of the National Greenback-Labor party. Only about forty followers of the party were on hand when the convention assembled. It was nearly three o'clock in the afternoon when Chairman Ryndor called the convention to order. He said he was not surprised at the small number present, as it was an off year. He desired, however, that the convention should make up in good work for the apparent lack of interest. After prayer by Rev. William K Crosby, of Warren, the roll was called and a committee on platform, with S. L Youngman, of this city, as Chairman, was appointed. After the committemen had been instructed by the chairman as to their duties they retired, and a committee on permanent organization was appointed and in a few minutes reported the following officers; President, Thomas A. Armstrong, of Allegheny; vice presidents, Thomas T. Lewis and Justus Watkins. While the convention was waiting for the committee on platform speeches were made by Thomas A. Armstrong, Charles N. Brumm, J. K. Sanborn and others, the addresses being on the usual grounds and theories and all predicting an early success of the party, which, it was claimed, was now sleeping. At four o'clock the committee on platform reported.

The platform, which was quite long, asserts that money is solely the creation of law, without regard to the material used, and that the government should alone issue and control its volume; denounces the national banking system as a crime against the labor of the country, the creator of wealth, and for which both old parties were responsible; charges that the legislation of the country has been controlled by the money power for twenty years, and against the interests of the business and producing classes; asserts opposition to all forms of monopoly in transportation and telegraphy; denounces the monopoly of land as one which had wrought much damage and demands that the land shall be held for actual settlers; holds it as the imperative duty of the government to place such imposts upon all imported merchandise that can readily be produced in this country as shall at least equal the difference in the cost of the capital and labor and charges the banks of the United States with causing the reduction of the duties on imports by the passage of the revenue law through the last Congress for the purpose of relieving themselves of the payment of taxes and to perpetuate the national debt; favors a national bureau of labor to collect and furnish the people statistical facts; favors prompt legislation for the greatest number and is opposed to prolonging the sessions of the State Legislature for the accomplishments of partisan ends.

The platform was unanimously adopted. The convention then proceeded to nominate a State ticket. For Auditor General, T. P. Ryndor, of Blair, was nominated by acclamation; for State Treasurer, Dr. W. D Whitney, of Warren, was unanimously nominated. He declined, but finally accepted. After his acceptance a telegram was received from Captain A T. Marsh, of Erie, stating that he would accept the nomination for State Treasurer Dr. Whitney then again declined in a neat speech and Captain Marsh was nominated by acclamation. T. P. Ryndor was re-elected chairman, and Altoona was decided upon as the place for holding the next convention. After the transaction of minor business the convention adjourned.

Little Jack's aunt had not been quite pleasant toward him for a day or two because he was very noisy. At tea last night he said all at once. "I wish we lived in England." "Well, what put that into your head?" inquired his father with curiosity. "Because, if you lived in England you couldn' marry Aunt Fanny when mother dies." Great astonishment of the family at the precocity of the family.

The Duke of Connaught, better known in this country as prince Arthur, recently acted as a bartender at a charity entertainment and sold mixed drinks to distinguished drinkers at high prices.

The Way of the World.

A PRETTY LITTLE STORY WHICH INVOLVES A FABLE OR TWO.

Once on a time there was a man who went into the wood to cut hop-poles, but he could find no trees so long and straight and slender as he wanted, till he came high up under a heap of stones. There he heard groans and moans as though some one was at death's door. So he went up to see who it was that needed help, and then he heard that the noise came from under a great flat stone which lay upon the heap. It was so heavy it would have taken many a man to lift it. But the man went down again in the wood and cut down a tree, which he turned into a lever, and with that he tilted up the stone, and lo! out from under it crawled a dragon, and made at the man to swallow him up. But the man said he had saved the dragon's life, and it was shameless thanklessness in him to want to eat him.

"May be," said the dragon; "but you might very well know I must be starved when I have been hundreds of years under the stone and never tasted meat. Besides, it's the way of the world—that's how it pays its debts."

The man pleaded his cause stoutly and begged for his life; and at last they agreed to take the first living thing that came for a daysman, and i his doom went the other way the man should not lose his life, but if he said the same as the dragon, the dragon should eat the man.

The first that came was an old hound, who ran along the road down below under the hillside. Him they spoke to and begged him to judge.

"God knows," said the hound, "I have served my master truly since I was a little whelp. I have watched and watched many a night through, while he lay warm asleep on his car, and I have saved house and home from fire and thieves more than once; but now I can neither see nor hear any more, he wants to shoot me. And so I must run away, and slink from house to house, and beg for my living till I die of hunger. No! it's the way of the world," said the hound; "that's the way it pays its debts."

"Now I am coming to eat you up," said the dragon, and tried to swallow the man again. But the man begged and prayed hard for his life, till they agreed to take the next comer for a judge. And if he said the same as the dragon and the hound, the dragon was to eat him and get a meal of man's meat; but if he did not say so, the man was to get off with his life.

So there came an old horse limping down the road which ran under the hill. Him they called out to come and settle the dispute. Yes; he was quite ready to do that.

"Now I have served my master," said the horse, "as long as I could draw or carry. I have slaved and striven for him till the sweat trickeled from every hair, and I have worked till I have grown lame and halt and worn out with toil and age; now I am fit for nothing. I am not worth my food, and so I am to have a bullet through me, he says, Nay! Nay! It's the way of the world. That's how the world pays its debts."

"Well, now I'm coming to eat you," said the dragon, who gaped wide and wanted to swallow the man. But he begged again hard for his life.

But the dragon said he must have a man's meat; he was so hungry he couldn't bear it any longer.

"See younder comes one who looks as if he was sent to be judge between us," said the man, as he pointed to Reynard the fox, who came stealing between the stones of the heap.

"All good things are three," said the man; "let me ask him, too, and if he gives doom like the others, eat me up on the spot."

"Very well," said the dragon. He, too, had heard that all good things were three, and so it should be a bargain. So the man talked to the fox as he had talked to the other.

"Yes, yes," said Reynard; "I see how it all is," but as he said this he took the man a little to one side.

"What will you give me if I free you from the dragon?" he whispered in the man's ear.

"You shall be free to come to my house, and to be lord and master over my hens and geese, every Thursday night, said the man.

"Well, my dear dragon," said Reynard, "this is a very hard nut to crack. I can't get it into my head how who are so big and mighty a beast, could find room to lie under you stone.

"Can't you?" said the dragon; "well, I lay under the hill-side, and sunned myself, and down came a landslide and hurled the stone over me."

"All very likely, I dare say," said Reynard; "but still I can't understand it, and, what's more, I won't believe it till I see it."

So the man said they had better prove it, and the dragon crawled down into the hole again; but in the twinkling of an eye they whipped out the lever and down the stone crashed on the dragon.

"Lie now there till doomsday," said the fox. "You would eat the man, would you, who saved your life?"

The dragon moaned and groaned, and begged hard to come out, but the two went their way, and left him alone.

The very first Thursday night Reynard come to be lord and master over the henroost, and hid himself behind a great pile of wook hard by. When the maid went out to feed the fowls, in stole Reynard. She neither saw nor heard anything of him; but her back was scarce turned before he had sucked blood enough for a week, and stuffed himself so that he couldn't stir. So when she come again in the morning, there Reynard lay, and snored, and slept in the morning sun, with all four legs stretched straight; and he was as sleek and round as a German sausage.

A resolution has been passed in the senate refusing to take pay after September 10th. It was introduced by a Democrat.

The fight between Mitchell and Slade which was to have taken place in Kansas, has been declared off. It is said that Mitchell is afraid of Slade.

The population of Milton and suburbs, according to a census just taken by Lieutenant L. V. Housel, is 4,642, the suburbs footing up a total of 1,997 inhabitants.

A memorial meeting in commemoration of the late J. McDowell Sharpe was held in the House at Harrisburg on Monday evening. A number of speeches were made in which the noble character of the deceased was enlogized.

The Wilkesbarre Union-Leader doubts that when Colonel Ingersoll reaches death's dark river he will be able "to feel the same sweet consolation as did Jere Black, who died with a prayer on his lips and a hopeful faith in a restful future sustaining him."

Judge Hoadly, the Democratic candidate for Governor in Ohio, having been advised by his nearest friends to retire, on account of ill health, from the excitements of the political canvass now raging there, arrived in Philadelphia last Monday for the purpose of placing himself under medical care.

Chairman McKee, Tom Marshall, Charles S. Wolfe and Levi Bird Duff are among the prominent independent republicans who do not propose to train under the Cameron banner this year any more than they did last, and in connection with this fact that the York Gazette observes that the woods are full of them in many parts of the state.

In his denunciation of bosses Senator Sherman did not name his connection by marriage, Senator Cameron, but the implication was so strong that nobody can doubt to whom he referred when he said, "Whenever anybody, I don't care who he is, undertakes to be a boss over any party, or to manipulate or control an election, that man ought to be put down."

The Northumberland county democratic primaries resulted in the nomination of P. A. Mahon, of Shamokin, for district attorney; J. R. Hilbish for county surveyor and Messrs. Marr, Solenberger, Lyons, Metcalf and Berkheimer delegates to the next state convention. The instructions were unanimous for William L. Dewart, sr., as delegate to the next national convention.

The Warren Ledger says Captain Taggart democratic candidate for auditor general, is well satisfied with the political outlook. Having traveled through a large portion of the state, he has observed a general feeling of public weariness with the insincerity and trickery of the stalwart leaders in apportionment and other matters, and there is "a feeling in the air" that a full democratic vote will insure a rousing democratic victory.

On the 20th of this month a monument to the memory of General Zachary Taylor will be unveiled at Louisville, Kentucky. The arrangements are such as promise to make the occasion one of special interest. Although lacking the polish and culture of the statesman, he was a true patriot, brave soldier and possessed the good judgment which secured the services of able counsellors when he assumed the duties of President, and had he lived he might have ranked among the most useful and efficient. His untimely death, however just as he was entering fully upon his record as an executive officer so brief as to prevent his name being linked with any important measure. His fame, therefore, rests upon his military services.

The End of the Rebel Yell Issue.

During the last Presidential campaign there was no small amount of frothy eloquence over the "Solid South" and the wicked rebels. Until the tariff issue was sprung late in the canvass it was the chief stock in trade of the Republican orators and became a sort of national nuisance.

There is no probability that we will be afflicted with it in next year's campaign. The republicans can no longer make any use of that issue without hurting the feelings of some of their useful allies.

If the Mahone conference which met in Washington did any good whatever it was in disarming the Republicans of this ancient and now blunt-edge instrument.

Mahone was a rebel brigadier, Chalmers was a rebel brigadier, Longstreet was a rebel brigadier, Cash was a rebel colonel, and most of the other participants were at some time or other adorned with a rebel uniform.

The presence of these men in the Republican party is a sufficient guarantee that we shall hear no more of the windy tirades against rebels and the danger of putting them in power.

The Mahone alliance with the Republican party is, therefore, in this sense at least, a genuine public service. The rebel yell, of which George William Curtis and other Republican orators used to speak with horror, is now no longer solely a Democratic yell. It will henceforth burst out from Republican throats also, and the ears to which it was once so harsh will hence listen to it with delight, as if it were sweet music.—Chronicle-Herald.

Niles on Apportionment.

The republican county conventions, which are run either by the small subbosses under instructions from Boss Cooper or that class of politicians fitly described by Horace Greely as "narrow-minded block-heads," are rushing heedlessly into endorsement of the revolutionary policy of the senate in blocking legislation on the subject of apportionment. Perhaps if the ignorance of those who generally compose those conventions were not so dense they would hesitate before committing themselves against the position on apportionment taken by the gentleman who heads their own state ticket. On April 3, 1883, Mr. Jerome B. Niles, now the republican candidate for auditor general, arose in his place in the house of representatives and began a speech on congressional apportionment in the following language:

"I agree with the members on the other side of the house that it is the duty of this legislature to pass a bill districting the state into congressional districts."

He then went on to criticise the democratic congressional apportionment bill, complaining chiefly of the Indiana district as not being actually republican and of the Huntingdon district as not having sufficient republican majority. But, mark, he distinctly and emphatically declared it to be "the duty of this legislature to pass a bill districting the state into congressional districts." In concluding his speech he undertook to read the democratic side of the house a lecture in regard to its duty, in these words: "I say it is your duty to forget your party and go upon the broad principles of patriotism and right regardless of where the chips shall fall." These words are like apples of gold in pictures of silver, but Mr. Niles fails to apply the precept they contain to his own conduct in the house, and the republican county conventions, with an audacity surely born of ignorance, endorse the gerrymandered bills of the senate and the revolutionary ultimatum based upon them. Mr Niles again in a speech in the house of representatives on the legislative apportionment bill, April 10, took occasion to say:

"Now, I agree with what was said by the democratic party in their last state convention, which met at this place on the 28th of June, 1882, representing the assembled wisdom of the democratic party of this state. * * The democratic party demands of the legislature an honest, just and true congressional and legislative apportionment." I agree with the democratic party that it is the duty of this legislature to pass an honest, a just and true legislative and congressional apportionment."

Mr. Niles thus twice put himself on record in the plainest and most positive language as believing it to be "the duty of this legislature to pass legislative and congressional apportionment bills." But the republican senate refuses to recede from its revolutionary and obstructive ultimatum and thus prevents the legislature from performing what Mr. Niles insists is its duty. Mr. Niles declared on April 3 that it was the duty of the democrats to "forget party and go upon the broad principles of patriotism and right" in making apportionments. But the republican senate refuses to forget party and in secret party caucus orders senators, according to their own confession, to support a partisan bill confessedly and shamelessly unjust and to adhere to it at every hazard. Mr. Niles proclaimed that on April 10 that he agreed with the democratic party that it is "the duty of this legislature to pass an honest, a just and a true legislative and congressional apportionment bill." The objections he then presented to the democratic bills have since been removed and therefore he must admit them to be "honest, just and true" bills. But the republican senate refuses even to consider those bills, amended as they have been to meet the views of Mr. Niles, and that gentleman himself sits in his seat and votes against them without a word of explanation. The conduct of the republican leaders, including Mr. Niles, is undoubtedly based on the low estimate they put on the intelligence of their own party and in this regard they have certainly done no injustice to the class who serve as delegates to republican county conventions.—Patriot.

Griefs of a Backslider.

From the Pittsburg Post.

The reverses of Colonel McClure these days should have the sympathy of all friends of much-sat-down-on humanity. He drew a very large draft of prophecy on the Berks county democracy, but they refused to honor it, and in various ways expressed their confidence in the state administration, and with unusual emphasis and unanimity. Thereupon the colonel pronounces the democracy of "Ault Berks" a bad lot, and that Cassidy is their prophet, which is very bad for the Cassidy if he has senatorial aspirations. Simultaneously with the bad taste for Berks, comes the explosion of the Times' double leaded sensation that at a conference of leading democrats, Governor Pattison was forced to his marrow bones, begged for mercy etc. This had the distinguished honor of being denounced as a lie on the floor of the senate on Wednesday by the alleged participants in the alleged conference. Really the gallant colonel is scoring up a formidable list of failures:

I. The Philadelphia rcordership assault in force on Pattison—a regular boomerang, which drew out the famous confession "you were right and I was wrong."

II. The terrible conflict in the executive chamber, between Governor Pattison and Senator Coxe—an awkward invention.

III. The Wallace-Randall combination to suppress Pattison—maintained by fabricated interviews.

IV. Making a speech for ex-Senator Chalfant to the Montour county democracy, denouncing the state administration. Bounced as a lie by Chalfant.

V. Putting the Berks county democracy in the field against the state administration. Answered by an overwhelming and emphatic indorsement of the governor and his policy.

VI. The bogus conference last week of the governor and leading democrats, at which Pattison weakened and begged to be saved from his own folly. Invented by the Times' special Harrisburg liar employed to "write down the administration." Denounced as a fabrication on the floor of the senate by leading democratic senators.

Of course that list loses sight of the minor daily inventions, of which there has been a great crop; but suggests as a McClure coat of arms, Munchausen rampant with the legend, "You were right, dear governor, and I was wrong."

An official report shows that there have been 27,318 deaths from cholera in Egypt since the outbreak of the epidemic. There have been 140 deaths among the British troops stationed in Egypt.

Deciding to Stand.

THE RESOLUTION THAT THE DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE ADOPTED.

The conference of the democratic senators and representatives Tuesday afternoon was held in the state library and was largely attended. Mr. Crawford, in the absence of Uncle Jake Zeigler, presided. The conference adopted a resolution to the effect "that it is the sense of this meeting that there shall be no adjournment until the apportionments are made."

This was agreed to, there being but sixteen votes against it. An amendment to the resolution—that a recess be taken until the 20th of November without pay was supported by the sixteen who voted against the first proposition. The discussion was long and participated in by nearly every one present. Senator Gordon made the leading address, a stirring appeal for the democrats to stand well together and apportionment must result.

A proposition was made to the effect that appropriation bills be passed and compensation be given to September 10th, and that after that date no pay until the bills are passed. This was postponed for the present.

The conference considered some minor matters and then adjourned without day.

Judge Black's Will.

YORK, September 3.—The will of Jeremiah S. Black was admitted to probate at York on Monday. It consists of twelve closely written pages. The executors are Vincent K. Keesey, Lieutenant Governor Chauncey F. Black and Isham H. Hornsby, and the witnesses are General S. W. Crawford, Melinda C. Willhelm and Horace Keesey. The will is considered very verbose by attorneys who have examined it and quite curious for so great a man to make. It was written at his dictation and each page bears the Judge's plain left-hand signature. The family request that its provisions shall not be made public. After making special bequests to all his children the undistributed portion, including Brockie, is left to the widow, and at her death Lieutenant Governor Black is to have the acceptance or refusal of it at a fixed valuation. The will is dated February 21, 1883. The estate is estimated at about $200,000.

ITEMS.

Two Hazleton girls, one twelve and the other fourteen years of age, upon waking in the morning about 4 o'clock, found a man apparently asleep under their bed. They screamed and he went through a window like a shot and escaped, although followed by the contents of Frank Hoffman's gun.

A man supposed to have been connected with the Northampton bank robbery in 1866, when over $200,000 were stolen, was arrested on Wall street, New York, Monday and locked up. He is supposed to be James Byrns, as all others concerned in the crime have been apprehended.

It is thought at the internal revenue bureau that the claims for rebate of taxes on tobacco, snuff and cigars, growing out of the recent internal act, have nearly all been presented, and it is now estimated that they will aggregate about $3,500,000. The total annual reduction in revenue on tobocco, snuff and cigars, it is now computed will be about $35,000,000.

The Philadelphia branch of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers held a meeting Monday afternoon. Master Workman Laverty presided. It was unanimously agreed that the brotherhood be declared dissolved, and that the master workman be directed to return to the Knights of Labor the charter and all secret work. A meeting of the members will be held in a week or ten days for the purpose of organizing a local, social and beneficial association of telegraphers. A new set of officers will be selected.

The inhabitants of Bellefonte speculate on their chances of having a population of forty thousand within the next five years. In commenting on this, the Journal has the following to say of its city: "We hope all will turn out favorably. Lock Haven sits in all her majesty, allowing her good manufacturing sites to lie idle, her people move elsewhere, and money sharks run the ranche. It's true, and you can't get over it." Lock Haven seems to be in a very bad condition if the Journal man's specs are not discolored.

A salt water turtle, weighing 500 pounds, was captured Sunday at the mouth of the Spurwink River, Maine, by two brothers named Jordan. It seems the monster got tangled in the nets these men had set, and they fastened to the turtle and towed him ashore. Monday they brought him into the city, and sold him to Captain Howard Knowlton, for his garden at Peaks' Island. The price paid for the turtle was $50. So broad is the shell of this monster that four boys found room to stand thereon, and the turtle was strong enough to crawl along with this load.

It has been learned that Edward H. Chase, Esq., of Wilkesbarre, collector of the Twelfth district, United States revenue, has appointed Henry E. Warner, Esq., deputy revenue collector for the counties of Lycoming, Clinton and Centre, now the Seventh division of the Twelfth district. Mr. Warner has also been appointed agent for the sale of internal revenue stamps for the city of Williamsport and Lycoming county. Mr. J. B. G. Kinsloe, of Lock Haven has been appointed agent for the sale of revenue stamps for Centre and Clinton counties.

The postoffice department has selected as the color for the new four-cent or double-rate stamp a shade of green somewhat darker than that in which the present three-cent stamp is printed. As the three-cent stamp will be retired from circulation no errors are likely to occur from similarity of color. The new stamp bears the profile likeness of Andrew Jackson and is quite handsome in design. The distribution to postmasters of the new two cent stamps will begin on September 1, and it is believed that everything will be in readiness for the change of letter postage on October 1.

The high price of peaches is embarrassing the canning and drying establishments, and the season's short pack is likely to make preserved fruit of various kinds very high next winter. It is related that one dryer went to a town in the lower part of Delaware, set up a drying establishment, putting considerable capital in machinery and buildings, and bought up the product of several neighboring orchards at an average of fifty cents per basket. When the season opened he found fruit selling high in the New York market, and he has allowed his drying establishment to remain unopened, shipping his fruit to New York and selling it at a handsome advance over the purchasing price. The story is a significant one.

Dunn's mercantile agency reports business for the week flowing with pretty full tide through the usual channels. The trade of the week has presented no new features. Grain, provision, cotton and petroleum have all declined, but the reduction in values has not been large. Business failures number 186, as compared with 165 last week. The increase was in the New England, the west and Pacific states.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of Scrofula about you, SCROFULA AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system. For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and removes the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

At all elections hereafter held under the laws of this Commonwealth, the election polls shall be opened at seven o'clock in the forenoon, and shall continue open without interruption or adjournment until seven o'clock in the evening when the polls will be closed.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN,

That every person excepting Justices of the Peace and Aldermen, Notaries Public and Persons in the militia service of the State, who shall hold or shall within two months have held any office or appointment of profit or trust under the United States, or of this State, and city or corporated district, whether a commissioned officer or otherwise, a subordinate officer or agent who is or shall be employed under the Legislature, Executive or Judiciary Department of this State, or of any city or of any incorporated district, and also, that every member of Congress and of the State Legislature, and of the select or common council of any city, or commissioners of any incorporated district, are by law incapable of holding or exercising at the same time the office or appointment of Judge, Inspector or Clerk of any election of this Commonwealth, and that no Inspector, Judge or other officer of such election shall be eligible to be then voted for.

The Inspectors and Judge of the elections shall meet at the respective places appointed for holding the election in the district to which they respectively belong, before seven o'clock in the morning, and each of said Inspectors shall appoint one clerk, who shall be a qualified voter of such district.

The qualified voters of the several districts in this county at all general, township borough and special elections, are hereby hereafter authorized and required to vote by tickets printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, severally classified as follows: One ticket shall embrace the names of all Judges of Courts voted for, and labelled outside, "Judiciary;" one ticket shall embrace the names of all the state officers voted for and to be labelled "State;" one ticket shall embrace the names of all county officers voted for, including the office of Senator, and Members of Assembly, if voted for, and members of Congress, if voted for, and be labelled "County;" one ticket shall embrace the names of all township officers voted for, and be labelled "Township;" one ticket shall embrace the names of all borough officers voted for, and be labelled "Borough."

And each class shall be deposited in separate ballot boxes.

HAY FEVER.

For years I have been afflicted with Hay Fever from early in August until frost. I gave Ely's Cream Balm a trial. The relief was immediate. I regard myself cured. G. SCHREIBER, Supt. of Cordage Co, Elizabeth, N. J.

Apply by little finger into the nostrils. By absorption it effectually cleanses the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for colds in head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Sold by druggists. COURT PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, the Hon. WILLIAM ELWELL President Judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace and the Court of Common Pleas and Orphans' Court in the 26th Judicial District, composed of the counties of Columbia and Montour, and the Hons. James Lake and F. L. Shuman, Associate Judges of Columbia county, have issued their precept, bearing date the 6th day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and to me directed for holding a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, Court of Common Pleas and Orphans' Court, in Bloomsburg, in the county of Columbia, on the fourth Monday, being the 24th day of Sept. next, to continue for two weeks.

Notice is hereby given to the Coroner, to the Justices of the Peace, and the Constables of the said County of Columbia, that they be then and there in their proper person at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said 24th day of Sept. with their records inquisitions and other remembrances, to do those things which to their offices appertain to be done. And those that are bound by recognizance to prosecute against the prisoners that are or may be in the jail of the said county of Columbia, to be then and there to prosecute them as shall be just. Jurors are requested to be punctual in their attendance, agreeably to their notices. Dated at Bloomsburg the 14th day of Aug. in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three and in the one hundred and seventh year of the Independence of the United States of America.

The Prohibition County Convention will be held in Wilkes-Barre on Tuesday, September 11th, with a public meeting in the evening, at which Professors H. D. Walker, H. D. Patton and Mr. John R. Fordham are expected to deliver addresses.

John W. Gordner of this town was arrested last week at Plymouth and lodged in jail at Wilkesbarre, on the charge of stealing horses. It seems that he went to Centre Hall, Centre county, and purchased a team, and paid for it with a forged check on a Lewisburg bank. This is not Gordner's first offense.

Col A. J. Frick of Danville has been appointed Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue of this district. The Sunbury Daily states that "there are now in the district 1305 cigar manufacturies, twenty-five breweries, twenty distilleries, twelve rectifiers, three wholesale dealers and one tobacco manufactory.

The rumor that the price of tuition in the Model School has been doubled is without foundation. The price continues to be twenty-five cents per week. The building has been greatly improved by the addition of two coats of paint, window blinds and a steam heating apparatus beneath. The attendance last term exceeded one hundred, and the opening this fall has been very promising.

A farmer observed a flock of quails running along between the rows of corn which was just sprouting. Conceiving the idea that they were pulling up his corn, one of the birds was killed, and its crop examined. Instead of corn it was found to contain one cut-worm, twenty-one stripe-bugs and over one-hundred chinch-bugs. This shows conclusively that the quail is a valuable bird to the farmer, and one that should be protected instead of being hunted down and shot for mere amusement by sport-loving hunters.

We are credibly informed that the new jail must be drained or abandoned, that it cannot be used for the purposes for which it was intended without drainage, and the questions as to whether it can, as now constructed, be drained, and if so, whether the county had better go to that expense, or repair the old jail for use and occupation will be submitted to the Grand Jury of the county at the approaching session. Should not at least some of the leading citizens and tax-payers of each township attend to this matter at next court and confer with the Grand Jury on these subjects?

Farmers Read This.—Farmers wishing a first-class article of phosphate, can get it at Lightstreet at any time. Stop and get prices and examine goods before buying.

The Nail Works.—The three double blast furnaces connected with the nail works in this place were put in operation on Wednesday. The nail department will not be ready for two weeks yet. Everything is working to the satisfaction of the managers. The connection with the well on the Smelting Company's land has not been made yet, so the supply of water is limited, but that will be completed in a few days. The starting of the mill has created a good deal of excitement and crowds of people have been visiting the works.—Sunbury Democrat.

Correct styles,
Choicest fabrics,
Sure fits,
Lowest prices,
are the mottoes of David Lowenberg.

A man named Harry Strine died recently in Northumberland county of hydrophobia. Just as they were about to bury him his friends telegraphed to send the remains to Harrisburg. There a distressing accident occurred. In taking the rough box from the car and placing it on a truck it slipped off the latter and went crashing to the Belgian pavement. The lid of the pine box flew off and the coffin with its occupant was spilled out. To add to the scene the top of the coffin burst and the remains were thrown face downward into the gutter. The body was greatly decomposed and swollen and a stench of an unbearable character followed. Matters were finally righted and the remains were taken to his home. Much excitement was caused by the accident.

A Reminder.

David Lowenberg having just returned from New York and having purchased his Fall Stock, is now prepared to offer the latest styles in gentlemen's wear, and invites an early inspection of the new goods.

A Card of Thanks.

Ent Post, 250 G. A. R., at their meeting on Friday evening last, by a unanimous vote return their thanks to the citizens of Afton and vicinity for their liberal donations and patronage at the camp fire held at their place on the 25th ult., and especially to the ladies for their kind assistance. The Post realized $102.33.

They also extend their thanks to the Bloomsburg band for the music furnished.

By Committee.

Baltimore's Carnival.

September 11th, 12th, and 13th have been set apart for the Summer Night's Festival at Baltimore, and it is promised by the committee in charge that the illuminations, processions, and other features of the Oriole celebration will surpass all previous efforts in this line. On September 11th an association of gentlemen, representing Lord Baltimore, his courtiers, household, and officers, will be escorted from the vessel landing to the City Hall by a great military procession.

September 12th, grand illumination of Baltimore.

September 13th, mystic procession of forty great tableaux, on wheels, in which it is stated that thirteen hundred men and over two hundred horses will be employed. Grand ball at the Academy of Music will conclude the celebration.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from all the principal ticket stations to Baltimore and return, particulars of which may be had at ticket offices.

Coal Oil John Again.

THIS TIME HE APPEARS WITH SIX INDICTMENTS AGAINST HIM.

It seems John W. McNulty, the gentleman who laid claim to being the original Coal Oil Johnnie in a Harrisburg restaurant several months ago, exhibiting at the time a number of specimens of copper to show the new enterprise he was running near New Cumberland, is in trouble. The trouble takes six different forms, in the shape of six different indictments. The Cumberland county court, now in session at Carlisle, heard the finding of the grand jury in six true bills, and will try McNulty on the six different charges, forgery, false pretense, uttering a forgery, and so on. This is a perfect cyclone of misfortune on McNulty' likely to sweep him from public sight and mind and nip in the bud his many schemes to gather in the shekels from the copper ore mines, real estate and the Harrisburg and Western company. McNulty has been going for the farmers, evidently in the New Cumberland section of Cumberland county, and the farmers have been going for him.

Stillwater Jottings.

Editors Columbian;

You must allow us the privilege of writing in praise of our beautiful and picturesque little village. Located on a fine site along the banks of the lovely Fishing Creek, Stillwater with its handsomely painted buildings, presents an appearance unsurpassed any where in this part of the state. Lately a spirit of enterprise and activity has infused itself into the leading citizens of the place, and improvements in way of new and splendid buildings have been the result, and we hope to see more of them. What we most need to set us on an even footing with the rest of the world, is the much talked of railroad which is at present agitating our neighborhood. Some of our citizens have subscribed liberally, while others of our well-to-do men are standing in the way of it. Strange that some men prefer the ox-cart and wheel barrow which our forefathers followed.

M. W. McHenry has repaired his mill-dam which was partly destroyed by the late freshet.

Painters and glaziers are putting the finishing strokes on Mr. J. F. McHenry's new house. It is a splendid example of architecture.

M. J. Williams of Bloomsburg was in town last week slating Stephen Drescher's new house. Gum, is a splendid mechanic.

Mr. Isaiah Raber has moved into his new house. He has one of the most beautiful houses in town.

The crops of corn and buckwheat, while not so good as we have had some times in the past, are quite promising.

Stephen Drescher is working a large force of men on his new building, and will soon have completed one of the finest houses in the Fishing Creek valley.

With this humble contribution, we will lay aside our pen till next week.

An Old Lady's Birthday.

The frequent booming of a cannon on the banks of Catawissa Creek, at the ancient town of Catawissa on Saturday last, was not to celebrate the eighty-second birthday of Mrs. Sarah Clark although it might have been taken as such; but to do honor to the day there assembled at Mrs. Clark's residence, over forty relatives, who at once demanded the old lady's keys, and assumed complete control of her household affairs for the day.

The many different branches of her family were represented from toddling infancy to old age all bent upon a pleasant day. The assemblage of so many was somewhat of a surprise to "Aunt Clark" and the occasion one of no little excitement, but the old lady received the friends, and moved pleasantly and conveniently about among them, with the most refreshing old time courtesy and sprightliness. In her old house—one of the oldest and quaintest in Catawissa—there lingers yet the air of days long gone by, when a birthday might have been celebrated there, by an assemblage in wigs, knee breeches, tall combs and high heeled shoes.

In spreading the two large tables, old cupboards and closets were ransacked by those guests who prepared the sumptuous dinner, and the oldest china and silverware again saw the light. Notably among them was a teapot one hundred and fifty-five years old and a large round silver salver or plate that looked as though it might have groaned under a big browned turkey two hundred years ago. The table was graced here and there with china old enough to raise the envy of the least envious of bric a brac gatherers. Then too, there were silhouette pictures of old members of the family, for which the artist charged three dollars apiece some sixty or seventy years ago; and then some quaint old furniture stood about bespeaking Aunt Clark's age, and possibly the age of those before her.

Mrs. Clark, whose husband was James Clark, has been a widow for thirty-one years, and has resided in the house she now occupies for nearly sixty years. It was the wish of those present upon her birthday that she might continue to occupy her home many years longer.

Of the guests who participated in the pleasant affair, besides those of Mrs. Clark's immediate household, there was: Mr. Andrew Clark and daughter residing near Catawissa; Mrs. James Funston a sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Funston and family, Dr. and Mrs. Fessler and daughter, all of Newbury, Pa., Mrs. and Mr. H. J. Clark, a son, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Funston, Mrs. Henry Wilson and daughter, Mrs. Jacob Dieffenbach, the Misses Dieffenbach and brother, Mrs. W. C. Richey, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Wirt, all of Bloomsburg; Mrs. L. J. Funston of Williamsport, Mrs. Gearhart of Danville, Mrs. C. R. Funston of Muncy, and little ones too numerous to mention.

From Berwick.

Berwick, September, 4th., 1883.

Eds. Columbian:

Last Saturday was a lively day in town. Turks with their dancing bears, and their horses that looked like the ghosts of former horses, upon whose backs were strapped on either side squalid babes that reminded one of the squaw and her papoose. What a looking set—ragged, filthy, garrulous—with pieces of old carpet wrapped around them, dishevelled hair—the last run of shad left blooming alone. God and nature never intended human beings to go wandering through the earth in that way.

Then came the great balloon at night that didn't go up. It was hardly known whether it was intended to go up or down. It did neither, however, but simply toppled over, and that was the end. At night there was a rope stretched across from St. Charles Hotel to the store of Bowman & Crispin. John Vanderslice mounted upon it in show clothes to tread it. He did not tread, but fell, because the rope gave way precipitating John to the pavement below. He found himself with a lame leg, but brave, undaunted John had the rope readjusted, sprang again upon it and walked it with success, performing also upon the trapeze to an admiring and applauding crowd. He proposes to travel.

A week ago last Saturday, under a large pavillion on Craig's lot above town, we had quite an entertainment at afternoon and night. Acrobatics, singing, dancing and the great feature of occasions, sparring, in which there was exhibited considerable skill by the following parties: Vanderslice, Williams, and especially the two Thomases, Peter and David, from Danville. Peter is regarded as a professional. James Wright won the silver cup. All of it under the management of our townsman, A. W. Fritz. There was a fine audience at night.

We are having fine rains for the later crops. Some of the early corn is beyond redemption.

Our public schools opened up on Monday last, with full attendance. The weather is beautiful since the rain.

Considerable malaria.

Daniel McHenry from Fishingcreek, enterprising lumberman, is often seen in town. He is engaged cutting lumber across the river.

Geo. Vanatta has grown fat since his pleasant visit to Centre county and Snowshoe. A friend recently from Milton reports that William Jacoby is in fine spirits and is doing well.

The numerous friends of toll-keeper Savidge, in Fishingcreek, will be pleased to learn that he is on his feet again and attending to his duties. He is giving good satisfaction.

We learn the distillery below Berwick commenced operations on Saturday last.

Col. John G. Freeze's History of Columbia county is doubtless a thorough work, but the Colonel gives credit to Kurtz's Pamphlet for his history of the earliest inhabitants of Berwick. Kurtz got his information from the centennial address of E. J. Bowman delivered in Berwick by that gentleman in 1876, on July 4th. Mr. Bowman got his information principally from his mother, Anna Bowman, the wife of Jesse Bowman, one of the oldest inhabitants and business men along the river, now deceased. Mrs. Bowman's memory was remarkably clear up to her last sickness.

Berwick is going on building notwithstanding the temporary depression in business.

Isaiah Bower's store room is nearly completed.

J. F. Opdyke's new residence is nearly finished.

Doctor Wm. Freas has succeeded in removing his house from Front to Tenth street, on rollers.

G. W. Maugher, formerly of Bloom, is running a good hotel at the depot. His house has been renovated and has an additional set of rooms.

The hotels of Hoyt and Adams are doing good business.

The car works are on their 200 car job. The rolling mill is running on full time.

We understand from J. W. Knouse, who has been visiting Greenwood and other townships lately, that coal is found in Greenwood township. This is rather simultaneous with the Fishingcreek railroad.

The Sportsman's Hand-book Free.

Before starting on his autumn hunting or fishing expedition the wise sportsman will do well to consult the pages of "A Paradise for Gunners and Anglers," a neat and handy publication, recently issued by the Passenger Department of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad. This little pamphlet finds the sportsman's paradise in the Maryland and Delaware Peninsula, and that section is exhaustively treated with regard to its hunting and fishing resources. Not only are all its birds and fishes discussed and described, but their habits are descanted upon and their haunts disclosed. Valuable hints are also given as to the time and manner when angler or gunner may work with the best success; and explicit directions as to routes and stopping places, accompanied by an excellent map of the section, renders the work a complete guide book. The book is handsomely illustrated with plates the principal species of game, and is arranged so as to be carried in the pocket with convenience. Such a guide book to a district so rich in birds, water fowl, and fish must prove an invaluable prize to the sportsman.

Copies may be procured, free of charge, by addressing James R. Wood, General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, Philadelphia, Pa.

A suspension of judgment is all we ask—don't buy anywhere until you have seen the new goods at David Lowenberg's.

Centre Notes.

What will we fatten the hogs with this fall? The corn crop will be a light one.

The thieves who entered the barn of Samuel Hagenbuch and stole his smoked meat and buggy harness are unheard of yet.

Last week a strange looking man passed thorough here with two fine-looking horses. It proved to be a thief. He stole the team in Centre Co., we believe. He was captured.

Samuel Creveling lost a valuable horse recently.

W. G. Creveling has returned home again and commenced work. "General" reports a pleasant vacation.

Our school directors are having a two story school-house erected at Lime Ridge. This shows a step towards education.

Saturday the gunners began shooting squirrels, some of them before. We have not heard of their success.

The festival held at the Hidlay Union church Saturday evening was a grand success. H. V. White of Bloomsburg was in attendance.

Our young sports looked so pleasant on Sunday that we have come to the conclusion they made a "mash" Saturday evening.

Wilson Creasy was the fortunate person at the festival. He guessed the cake. It weighed four pounds and thirteen ounces. He and the group which ate it said it was splendid. As we were not amongst them we take their word for it.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7 1882.

Mr. John H. Phelps, Scranton, Pa., My Dear Sir:—Promptly upon receipt of your Elixir, ten days since, I entered upon its use according to directions, stopping my Iodid Patass., Ammon. and Wine of Colchicum. At that time I was completely disabled with gout in both feet and rheumatism in both knees, and helpless. Now I comfortably hobble about the house, and expect to be out in a week. It may be a coincidence, my amendment and the use of your medicine. I hope for no occasion to try it again, but if need be I will try it again in a fresh attack with great confidence.

Grape Culture and Port Wine.

Mr. A Speer of New Jersey, one of the largest grape producers in the East, commenced, but a few years ago, in a small way, to make wines from currants, and blackberries, and other fruits. He now controls large vineyards of the Oporto grape, from which his famous Port Grape Wine is made, and which chemists and physicians say rivals for its beneficial effects on weakly and aged persons, and the consumptive. Worth Knowing.

N. J. Hendershott desires all who are afflicted with Rheumatism in any form to call at his drug store and receive valuable information. Come one, come all, of whatever nation, sex or color.

Ayer's Ague Cure, when used according to directions, is warranted to eradicate from the system all forms of malarial disease, such as Fever and Ague, Chill Fever, Intermittent, Remittent and Bilious Fevers, and disorders of the liver. Try it. The experiment is a safe one, and will cost you nothing if a cure is not effected.

As When She Was Young.

"I have used Parker's Hair Balsam and like it better than any other similar preparation I know of," writes Mrs. Ellen Perry, wife of Rev. P. Perry, of Coldbrook Springs, Mass. "My hair was almost entirely gray, but a dollar bottle of the Balsam has restored the softness, and the brown color it had when I was young—not a single gray hair left. Since I began applying the Balsam my hair has stopped falling out, and I find that it is a perfectly harmless and agreeable dressing. aug 17-4 w

A Bad Case of Kidney Trouble Cured.

Auburn, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Sept. 29 1882. Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

I should have written you before in regard to the Rheumatic Syrup you sent me, but have been waiting to see if the result was permanent. I can confidently say that it has had a very gratifying effect on my wife, relieving her of all pain within three days after she commenced taking it. I also gave away one bottle of the Syrup to a friend, which had the same effect as on my wife. My wife has suffered great pain from rheumatism and kidney difficulty for years, and at times could hardly move. She has tried a great many medicines recommended to no purpose. It is the only remedy that gave her permanent relief.

Yours, Robert S. Armstrong.

Our Regards.

We are glad to say that our daughter, who has been afflicted with Rheumatism for about eight years, is nearly cured from the use of two bottles of Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir. We regard it as an excellent remedy, and anticipate a perfect cure by the time another bottle is taken.

A Woman in Disguise.

A Lehigh county physician has made a discovery near the line of Berks and Lehigh counties which has created some excitement among the inhabitants along the Blue Mountains. For some time a strange man known by the name of Marks Smith has been doing odd jobs for the farmers. He was about twenty-five years, good looking and tolerably well-dressed. He shunned company as a general thing, preferring to be alone. A few days ago Smith was taken sick and was compelled to keep his bed, which was in the loft of an old unoccupied barn. The Lehigh county doctor was summoned and made an examination of the sick man, but refused to say what his ailment was. On Tuesday the fact was made known that the person was not a man but a woman, and that an infant had been born in the loft. The doctor provided an old nurse and neighbors provided clothing for both mother and child. It is not known who the woman is. She says she left home, cut her hair off and disguised herself to prevent detection. She was sent to the Lehigh county almshouse.

We have now on hand a stock of twenty-five pound flour sacks—not printed. Also a large stock of printed sacks for wheat and buckwheat.

PRESENT POWER.

To-Morrow a Long Way off When Help is Wanted To-Day.

Comfort is never in a hurry. Pain and distress are in hot haste. It is to the "friend in need"—the friend who does something now—that the old adage pays the compliment of being "a friend indeed." That they do not keep the sufferer in suspense is the silent eloquence of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS. The plasters of other days—whether porous or otherwise—said—"Wait until to-morrow;" We can promise nothing on the spur of the moment." But pain unrelieved, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Benson's plasters act on application. They premeate, soothe warm and heal, containing, as they do, chemical and medical agents of the highest emcience. Their motto is NOW, and the genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of each plaster. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Sept. 7-4w d

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a writ of Fi. Fa., issued out of the Court of Common Pleas of Columbia county and to me directed, will be exposed to Public Sale at the Court House in Bloomsburg, on Saturday, September 15th, 1883,

at 2 o'clock, p. m., the following described real estate, situate in Hemlock township, Columbia county, Pa., containing 122 acres and 46 perches of land, whereon is erected a dwelling house, bar

Young Man, Brace Up.

A lazy man is too contemptible to live, and has no rights his fellow men are bound to respect. Young man, you may as well understand, first as last, that you have got to work for all you get in this world. You may not always get what you earn, as there are men in this world too mean and contemptible to give others what really belongs to them, but if you would keep out of the poor-house, and have a competency in your old age, you will have to work for it. To be sure there is a great difference in men. Some are endowed with greater intellectual powers than others, while some are greater physically. Some men are born low down in the scale of intellectualism, but mark you the physical of such a man. There is a way provided, however, for every man to better himself. You won't find it in the gin mill, neither is it to be found at the gaming table. Remember one thing, and that is, you have not the capacity to take into yourself all the strong drink made in this world and you had better let the contract out before you attempt to work on it.

When a young man sits down in idleness, with an idea that the world owes him a living, it's high time his body was committed to the dust from whence it came. As for his soul, nothing will be ever known of it. It is so small that it would rattle round in the shell of a mustard seed, and when it leaves his lazy carcass, is forever lost on account of its infinite proportions.

A record of the young men who have been unfortunate enough to have a fortune left them shows that eight in ten never amount to a single atom in the world, and seven out of the eight die bankrupts, financially morally and otherwise.

When a father brings up his son in idleness, never teaching him the first principle of economy or the value of a dollar, he commits a terrible blunder. The father guilty of such a crime generally has to saw wood for a living in his old age. Nine out of ten of the boys with fathers who bring them up in luxury, ere they reach the meridian of life are total wrecks. Wrecked on the rocks of total depravity which lie beneath the stream of life and on whose sharp and ragged edges thousand of lives have been wrecked and ruined. Money bags may, like bladders, keep you above the waters of distress for a time, but puncture them, let their contents escape, and you sink.

Young man, you have undoubtedly meant to do well. No young man ever goes astray intentionally, but in some idle thoughtless moment he graduates from soda water and lemonade to something stronger, and before he is fairly aware of it he has not only lost caste, but has a whole menagerie on his hands and is employing a doctor to help dispose of his immense elephants and the snakes that laughingly cuddle in his boots. Yes, the world presents too many temptations for the minds of all to withstand, and the only safe way for a young man is to keep away from the temptation. If you see a man at a wheel of fortune win ten times running by betting on the red, you just keep your hand out of your pocket and see him lose all he made at the next turn of the wheel and on the very color or number you knew would win.

Boys, the recklessness of youth is what has caused so many mothers' hair to turn as white as the driven snow. It's this that has caused so many fathers and mothers to give up by the wayside and be laid in premature graves. The follies of our young hang heavier upon the hearts of our fathers and mothers than the millstone that grinds the kernel into the finest flour. It's a pity that some of our young men of to day didn't fall in between the millstones before they have caused the trouble they have.

Young man, brace up! You never saw a man go to ruin whose mind is occupied in legitimate work. You never saw an industrious, frugal man in want. It's the smart alick young man who knows more than his father or mother that generally brings up at the end of the rope in a terrible cholera-morbis state morally, physically, mentally and otherwise. Its the same young man who invests his money in mining stocks and writes from the west to his friends that he is coming back and would like them to meet him on the outskirts of town with a suit of clothes. He had a hat. Don't treat with contempt the advice of older and experienced men, even if you don't do exactly as they advise, but remember you must work for all you get in this world.— Milwaukee Sun.

Feeding for Milk.

Correspondent Country Gentleman.

To the milk producer the quantity of mill each cow produces is an important item, and how he shall obtain that result is the question for him to solve. Can quantity be obtained or increased except at the expense of quality? Every experienced dairyman will answer him in the affirmative. A cow may be considered a machine for producing milk. She must be properly fed and cared for, or the result is unsatisfactory; it is as vain to expect that a cow will give milk without sufficient and proper food as to expect the steam engine to afford power without sufficient fuel and water. If we feed the steam boiler with water in excess or in insufficient quantity, and only fail enough to merely keep the boiler warm, it is vain to look for power; and so it is to give a cow only just food enough to keep her alive without starving. If milk is desired in quantity the cow must be fed a surplus beyond the other needs of the system, or all the best is lost. I think it is calculated that about two thirds of all a cow eats is needed to maintain her existence; all the profit comes in from the other one-third, and too often this is withheld entirely.

The milk-producing food should be provided and fed in abundance while the cows are giving milk, roots, grain and the best of hay and fodder during winter, and good pasture, with partial soiling, during summer. This will necessitate the growing of green crops like a mixture of peas and oats, rye, Hungarian grass, corn and clover for summer and a dry time. Corn meal is good for quality, but bran or middlings should make the larger half or two-thirds of the grain ration. I would leave cotton seed meal out or not feed over half a pint mixed with the other grain at a feeding. Corn and oats ground together make an excellent grain ration. In feeding green fodder I would cut the stalks finely and mix with it the meal and grain, and allow them to soften somewhat before feeding. Hard glazed cornstalks, fed whole, are apt to make the teeth sore, fed freely.

Stones which have long been numerous on the soil of South Carolina are now being manufactured and used for fertilizing purposes. The deposits of these stones, which were long considered worthless, are now said to be more valuable than the guano beds of Peru.

Poultry Raising.

Long Island has long been noted for its chickens and eggs, the latter always bringing an extra price in the New York market. The people of "Old Suffolk," (occupying most of the Island) pay special attention to poultry raising and render it profitable; and hence it is that we quote the following from the Suffolk County Journal as coming from what ought to be good authority: Starting with the averment that it will pay to raise poultry and buy feed, thus making the poultry business not only self-supporting, but profitable, the editor continues: "Every farmer should make a speciality of raising poultry because they can furnish feed cheaper than the poultryman who has to buy it. To make poultry raising profitable and successful it needs constant care and attention, and a plan of system to work on. The reason why so many people fail in trying to raise poulty is owing to careless management, and want of system. They allow their poultry to run at large, and lay where they please; in the barn, in the wagon house, under the fence or in the woodpile, or anywhere else, not only causing extra trouble in looking up eggs but a liability to lose a good many in the course of a year. And not only this, but the fowls become the source of a good deal of trouble to the owner and his neighbors by being allowed to run at large. We are told by poultry raisers that it is more profitable to keep them yarded with proper attention, than to let them run out. The yard should cover an acre or two of good grass ground, more or less, according to the amount of poultry you intend to raise. Have it surrounded with a good picket fence, and no fowls but the leghorns will get over it. (Keep them in a dry goods box.) Have this yard divided by a fence running through the middle, and on this line build your poultry houses, so that you can plow and plant each portoin of the yard alternately every two or three yeas, thus keeping your your poultry grounds in a healthy condition. Build your poultry houses three or four feet below the ground with walls or stone brick or cement. If a bank is convenient build on the sunny side of it; if you build on level ground, make a high, tight board fence for a protection on the north and west, or plant trees for that purpose. An orchard is a good place to locate a poultry yard. A poultry house built four feet above to the floor offords room for sun and air and good place to hatch chickens in cold weather. The south side of the building should be full of windows; sun and light are indispensiable to poultry raising. The fowls can roost in the upper part of the house, while the lower part should be kept expressly for laying and hatching purposes. Have your rows or nest boxes arranged one above the other about a foot apart with a partition dividing each nest, extending from one row of boxes to the other, so that the front part of each nest, box or apartment can be closed by a slat door (made of lath) while the hen is setting then preventing all intrusioin by the other poultry. Have a small pen made of lath with a cover, provided with a water trough and into this remove your setting hens every other day to feed and water, undisturbed by other poultry. Have some soft dry earth in one part of the pen for them to wallow Keep them here from twenty to thirty minutes, then turn out and they will immediatly seek their nests.

The old adage that poultry will not do well unless allowed to run at large as fast becoming obsolete. We see no reason why a herd of a hundred hens, and a yearly production of five hundred chickens cannot be as healthfully kept on an acre of ground as if they had a whole farm to run over. Have a pen built expressly to breed your chickens in. Do not let the old fowl eat with them. Do not let a hen run more than six or eight weeks with chickens in warm weather. Shut them up away from their chickens and they will be laying again in less than four months from the time of setting. Set your hens in October and November for early spring chickens which are most profitable. For the summer market set as early in the spring as your hens will brood. The light Brahmas are the best for weight. From five to six months old they will bring a dollar apiece. The old line of barnyard fowls are the best for broilers; and for egg producers the leghorns are the best.

Sprouting Wheat.

Pennsylvania Farmer.

It is generally supposed that a grain of wheat, if put into the ground would germinate anyway, but it is far from a fact. Wheat needs three essentials to cause growth, heat, moisture and air, and if any one of the three is withheld there is a failure. A kernel of wheat, placed in dry dust would never sprout; give it a trifle of moisture, a sickly blade will, after a while, appear, but so lacking in vigor that growth will soon cease. Give it only light and water it will throw out a strong root and even a stalk, but the life of the plant is measured exactly by the amount of food element contained within itself, and when this store is exhausted the plant dies. Give the plant moisture and soil, and keep the temperature at about 32 degrees and it will never germinate; raise it to 125 degrees and it will be cooked; place the soil temperature at about 85 degrees as an extreme limit, and perfection of growth is secured. Then depths of sowing have a most wonderful influence upon the plant. Drilled in twelve inches deep, probably not over one kernel in twelve would send a shoot above the surface, while at one inch the plants would make their appearance in four or five days. All these matters are subjects and objects within the sight and under the observation of the farmer, who, by reading aright the signs, can gain a fund of information that will be worth treasures to him—for, gained as they will be by his own discernment, they are calculated for his locality and latitude, and he knows then that they are the vaporings of any city editor whose agricultural pasture is the pine floor in a sixth story of a brick block, and the herbage of which is the waste paper of exchanges.

Eggs and Breeds.—According to the Poultry Monthly the average weight and number of eggs laid by the various breeds of fowls is; Light Brahmas and Partridge Cochins, eggs seven to the pound, lay 130 per annum; Black, White and Buff Cochins, eight to the pound, 115 per annum; Plymouth Rocks, eight to the pound, lay 150 per annum; Houdans, seven to the pound, lay 140 per annum; La Fleche, seven to the pound, lay 130 per annum; Creve Cœurs, eight to the pound, lay 140 per annum; Black Spanish, seven to the pound, lay 150 per annum; Leghorns, eight to the pound, lay 160 per annum; Hamburgs, nine to the pound, lay 140 per annum; Dominiques, nine the pound, lay 155 per annum; Game nine to the pound, lay 130 per annum; Bantams, sixteen to the pound, lay 140 per annum.

The Straits of Sunda Obliterated and Villages Buried.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF ISLANDS.

LONDON, Aug 30.—A despatch to Lloyds, from Batavia, estimates the loss of life by the volcanic eruptions at 60,000. The disaster is the most terrible and devastating of modern times. For forty eight hours the shocks of earthquake have increased in violence. Streams of burning lava poured down into the valleys, inundating villages and carrying death and flames to the most populous places. In the Straits of Sunda, the most important channel of navigation between the sea of Java and the Indian Ocean, islands have been swallowed up, the coast line changed or entirely obliterated, and every lighthouse has been swept away. This important straight, sixty miles in width, is now dangerous to navigation. New islands have arisen and landmarks on the coast are so altered as to make the country unrecognizable. The Government is preparing to obtain new soundings of the strait.

Sixteen volcanoes have appeared between the site where the islands of Krakatoa formerly stood at Sibisic Island. A part of the Bantam is an ashy desert. The cattle are starving, and the population are in despair. The Soengepan volcano was for many hours enveloped in an enormous luminous cloud, which gradually increased in size until it formed a canopy of lurid red and whitish gray over a wide extent of Territory. During this time eruptions increased, and streams of lava poured incessantly down the sides of the mountains, sweeping everything before them. Where a stream of lava entered an arm of the sea or cane in contact with the water of a river, the incandescent lava produced boiling heat and rapid vaporization. The fissures that opened in this thin crust as is solidified on the stream of lava emitted torrents of vapor, extending high into the air, and making a tremendous seething sound.

The air was filled with dense black smoke and rolling clouds of flame, which seemed to envelope and agitate the earth with torrents of burning lava rushing into the sea. The roar of the flames and hissing of the water became almost deafening. The returning waves rushed upon the shore to an unprecedented height.

Between the Southwestern point of the island and Gunnugg Guntur villages disappeared from sight during the second night of the eruption. The number of dead can scarcely be estimated. Seven hundred and four bodies of victims of the disaster have been buried in the District of Tamara, and three hundred bodies in the coast village of Kramat alone, and in other and more populous districts torrents of lava have buried whole settlements.

Table Fowl.

American Poultry Journal.

It is an admitted fact that the majority of the American people indulge to freely in pork as a meat food. And it is equally true that the major number of farmers and market poulterers are very indifferent as to the quality of poultry flesh they send to the market. One class of our people see nothing tempting in the poultry line to induce them to become lovers of chicken flesh, and the other do not endeavor to produce a fowl that will be universally considered excellent for the table.

If we take any of the fancy bred varieties of poultry there is hardly one except the game, which is what may be considered a first-class table fowl. The Dorking, though having a national reputation is almost tabooed from the poulterer's yard on account of being tender and difficult to rear in this country. The Asiatic, as now bred, carries enormous quantities of feathers, while their breast is almost devoid of flesh, and present little more than a heap of bones when placed on the table, while their skins are terribly course.

The Plymouth Rock has been bred in the past few years above the natural size. This alone, if no other, would detract from the quality of its flesh. The Houdan is fast being changed, by those who breed them for exhibition, into an ornamental fowl. The Crevecœur is also becoming a bird of plumage, and is difficult to raise. The Spanish will never answer for a table fowl, as they are utterly useless for the rough wear and tear of the farmyard. The Hamburgs, Leghorns and Polish are too small for the food market, and do not take on fat kindly. Farmers could not be induced to breed them for their eggs only. We are therefore compelled to arrive at the conclusion that among the many varieties of poultry we have not yet succeeded in breeding one which may be considered a prime table fowl.

The Kangaroo.

Lamb like as is the face of the kangaroo, tender and soft as are his eyes, he is by no means as gentle as he looks. Like the heathen Chinee, his countenance belies him, and there are few more exciting and withal dangerous sports than kangaroo chasing. To the hunter seeking for some new sensation, a visit to the wilds of Australia in search of kangaroos can be recommended. It requires a fleet horse to run an "old man" down, if he gets a fair chance to show tail, and strong, well trained dogs to tackle him when brought to bay. Inside his soft dewy lips are strong formidable teeth, which can bite severely. His forepaws, weak as they seem, can lift a dog high in the air and crush him to death; while when lying down—his favorite fighting attitude—he can kick with his powerful hind legs in a manner that rapidly clears a circle around him; and woe betide the man or dog that comes within reach of those huge claws, which can maim the one and kill the other. Of course we hear speak of the great kangaroo—the boomer or the old man of the colonists. As a matter of fact there are some thirty different kinds of kangaroos inhabiting various parts of Australia, and one species peculiar to New Guinea. They vary in size—from the tiny hare kangaroo of South Australia, the most agile of its kind, which is but little larger than a rabbit, to the several giant species, whether black, red, brown or gray, some of which stand nearly six feet high.

There are Indian girls in the Indian Territory University who are studying German, French, Latin and Greek, geology, morol philosophy, political economy and other branches of the college course.

An old minor was shown a bag of samples by a newly-arrived prospector and asked what it would run. He turned the specimen over, held it up to the light, and enunciated: "I should say that if you can save the gold in this and catch the silver, and not waste the lead, that it might run about—well, about $2 to the county.

Vital Questions!!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops?"

Oranges and Florida.

Better than Breezes and Blossoms—Under a New Flag.

Even the balmy air and orange grove of Florida fail to keep its people full of happiness and comfort. Art must help nature everywhere—in the tropics as among the pines of the North. "And chief among the blessings which are adapted to all zones," writes Dr. J. D. Wallace, of Fort Dade, Fla., "is PARKER'S TONIC. It seems to have the world for a field, and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seemed to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved me personally of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purifier and invigorant."

Messrs. Hiscox & Co. call especiel attention to the fact that after April 16, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply Parker's Tonic. The word "Ginger" is droopped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic, we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change. There will be no change, however, in the preparation itself; and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the signature of HISCOX & Co. is at the bottom of outside wrapper.
